Silverfall, developed by Monte Cristo delivers an average action RPG experience. To its credit it includes a wide variety of items, interesting stylized graphics, as well as complex crafting and skill trees. Unfortunately, at high widescreen resolutions, the onscreen text and menus are incredibly small making it difficult and tedious to read quests and navigate the various character screens. In addition, the camera control, while allowing 360 degree movement, is not automatically tethered to the orientation of the mini-map, making simple navigation a chore. Lastly, the actual action can grow a little dull, as melee characters in particular need only select a target and sit back while the ai and pc automatically duke it out. Despite these deficiencies, Silverfall is certainly a solid addition to any RPG library.. I knew from the ratings this game was badly received and still decided to try, because I hope it was similar to the first dungeon siege game which I loved. I'm not sure why dungeon siege was so awesome (there virtually was no plot after all, it was supremely linear hack and slash and yet. fond memories). The graphics aren't that fantastic, controls are iffy, AI is stupid, plot is, erhm, and the dialogues are horrible. If you REALLY have nothing better to do with your time, then by all means.. I want to like this. I love action RPGs. But this game is just beyond punishing. You quite literally die every 2 minutes. The click detection is appalling as well. It's built like an MMO, but plays like a single player game and unfortunately makes the worst of both worlds (enemies that are all back when you reload is a prime example. Makes for a LOT of grinding). I also have the PSP version and to be honest, it's the better of the 2.. I would like to say this was a shocker at first for many reasons 1. this was not easy to start to play game there was two problems with getting it to run on a new system and once running then mouse pointer was hidden then the config screen was messed so could not fix it. so yes there are issues and if you don't know how to fix and find them steam community forums then don't buy it. 2. once the game was running another shocker the tutorial was not annoying.(now days with way people program then its ment for a 8 year old kids for most video games not this game read tutorial or skip it and your given a high end mage with all the spells sink or swim. 3. once you die you lose every thing till you find the chest for the life insurance goblin. after many deaths . even more deaths starting out with undead only I built a mage it was fun. 4. There are not many games I go I have to play it though I have them diablo 3 same genre type of game. this one though is way better then that in that I feel like I'm playing a version morrwind with freedom to mess up it royally where can run in to something a low level can not deal with and good luck trying to run a way or load up next area and be ambushed with none of your spells on fun fun know your hot keys ! 5. like morrwind you can make the character in to any thing any hybrid mage tank , dps mage what ever you dream up with spells in the game you can make it truly your own. mine is summoner tank I have these undead and nature beast jump in to the battle with me i then stun enemys with frost wave and slowly beat there heads in with sword and sheald. to rap it up if you can get it to work dont mind a little dated grafics and you dont have a life because this will suck it up you just forget the time and keep playing this.. ok so i have only played a couple of hours but this game is fantastic.can be quite difficult at the beginning once you get the tutorial out of the way.if you go to wrong area or come across the wrong mob in this game your dead.but it has great character development and looks great for its age and is extremely fun to play.highly recommended if your an action rpg fan.
